FSB’s 2019 London Met graduates celebrated for distinctive creativity and ingenuity

written by Doncho Borisov | 03/12/2019

By Kunal Chan Mehta Article Date: 3rd December 2019

 Male Voice Female Voice

FSB’s business graduates were celebrated at London Metropolitan University’s Winter Graduation ceremony and recognised for their distinctive creativity and ingenuity on Monday 2nd December, at the bespoke Barbican Centre.

Graduation Day is a significant time when FSB students can take a look back at what they have accomplished since they first arrived and how they have changed and developed as an individual and as part of a community.

The School was delighted to welcome back its graduating students across its London Metropolitan University accredited programmes in business. FSB students and their families travelled to London from all over the world to attend a wonderful celebration of their academic achievements. The graduation ceremony was followed by a drinks reception where the new graduates revived old friendships and celebrated with peers, family and FSB staff.

Students from business subject areas took to the stage to shake hands with Professor Lynn Dobbs, London Metropolitan University's Vice-Chancellor, before receiving their degrees.

Professor Lynn Dobbs, London Met's Vice-Chancellor, opens the grand graduation ceremony. Photo: FSB

Larry Oseni, a Business Degree graduate, speaking about the event said: 'The graduation was a special occasion celebrating a life-changing achievement for me. Additionally, my family, friends and FSB staff are all very proud of me and this has given me a great sense of fulfilment. The ceremony was very well organised and it was the perfect way to conclude many years of hard work.'

That proud moment. Larry Oseni, Business Degree graduate, returning to his seat after collecting his award. Photo: FSB

Anu Nair Mathievanan, a Foundation Business Degree graduate, speaking about her student journey said: ‘FSB has made me confident and ambitious! My entire amazing vocational journey and experience is down to my first-class lecturers who helped me find my talents and to start thinking globally.’

FSB’s Student Union President, Fatuma Hussein, congratulated the students: ‘You have made us all very proud and have inspired many students to follow your pathway of hard work, commitment and dedication.’

Commenting on the day, Mr Syed Zaidi, CEO and Founder of FSB, announced: ‘It is my great privilege to congratulate and commend those of you who have devotedly served FSB and, by doing so, have reached an central landmark in your lives. FSB has taught you to live your own life – not the one that others have planned for you – so, go forth, remain aspirant and take a part of FSB with you. But never forget the moralities of tolerance and respect that you have established with us. Live these! Hold them close! Everyone is enormously proud of you today and we are sure you will continue to make us proud of you incessantly.'

Mr Syed Zaidi went on to add: 'I wish to thank Vice-Chancellor Professor Lynn Dobbs for her exemplary leadership that drives London Metropolitan University to ever greater heights.'

A sea of graduates. Photo: FSB

Larry Oseni, Business Degree graduate, (L) standing proud with Mahrou Rezania (R), London Met’s Course Leader at FSB. Photo FSB

Leave your congratulatory comments below or email the author of this article kunal.mehta@fairfield.ac for any questions.

Find out more about FSB's London Metropolitan University accredited courses: www.fsb.ac.uk/courses